Social workers protest PRC reversal of decision

By Margaux C. Ortiz

CITING THE SERIOUS IMPLICATIONS OF the Professional Regulation Commission's final judgment on their profession, social workers' groups have expressed concern over the PRC's recent reversal of a 2005 decision in the case of a non-government organization director aspiring to be a licensed social worker.

Professor Mabini Alcid, chair of the College of Social Work at the University of the Philippines, said the PRC's reversal of its Aug. 17, 2006, decision revoking the license of Eddy Abanes, director of an NGO based in Albay, has "serious implications for social work education and the profession in general."

"It has come to our knowledge that Mr. Abanes has been boasting that he won over the Board of Social Work because of the PRC resolution dated Feb. 17, 2007, that upheld his registration as a social worker," Alcid said in a letter to PRC Commissioner Leonor Tripon-Rosero.

Alcid said the academic community fully supported the Board of Social Work's motion for reconsideration of the PRC's February resolution.

In its motion for reconsideration, the Board of Social Work headed by Monina Marquez noted that it had found Abanes guilty of fraud and dishonorable conduct in its Nov. 14, 2005, decision.

According to the board, Abanes did not perform 1,000 hours of supervised social work practice using the methodologies prescribed under the Social Work Law and instead credited his years as director of his agency.

He likewise failed to produce any evidence of actual supervised social work practice, the board said.

After filing a motion for reconsideration which the board denied, Abanes filed a notice of appeal to the PRC which dismissed the appeal for lack of merit in August 2006.

However, when Abanes filed another motion for reconsideration in September 2006, the PRC reversed its previous decision upholding the board's judgment.

GSIS RESPONSE TO THE OPEN LETTER OF MPSTA

The Government Service Insurance System finds grossly unfair the allegations of inefficiency made by the Manila Public School Teachers Associations (MPSTA) over the state of their records in its database.

In answer to these unjust accusations, the GSIS, for the record, would like to state the following:

1. The GSIS stands by the veracity of the teachers' records in its database

The membership records in the GSIS database were established on the basis of the service records issued and certified by the Department of Education (DepEd) and which were submitted to the GSIS by the teachers themselves. As such allegations made by the MPSTA of inaccuracy in the records of government service and salaries in the GSIS database can be traced back to what seemed to be erroneous service records many have presented to the GSIS.

Be that as it may, the GSIS, since three years ago, has urged the teachers to submit proofs and records of their services to straighten up what they claim to be incorrect data in its computer files. In 2005, the GSIS even funded the Service Records Updating Project which the DepEd implemented all over the country.

To date, updated service records of public school teachers are still being received and as they come, uploaded by the GSIS in its database to replace the existing Members Service Profiles (MSPs) of teachers. Unless the teachers submit contrary proof, the GSIS maintains the records in its database are correct.

2. The GSIS continues to process loans and claims of teachers

It is not true that GSIS has withheld the processing of teachers' claims in light of DepEd's premium arrearages. We continue to process loans and claims applications of teachers on the basis of their membership and loan repayment records.

As a matter of fact, the loans and claims of public school teachers dramatically increased to 1.09 million last year, representing a 46% growth from 748,290 in 2006. In peso terms, loans and claims of teachers in 2007 amounted to P46.44 billion or 42% higher than the P32.63 billion recorded in the previous year.

Fig. 1 : Number of Loans and Claims Processed (000) 2005-2007

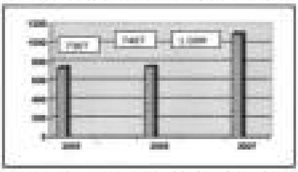

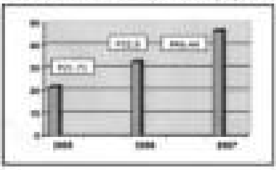

Fig. 2 : Amount of Loans and Claims Processed (PB) 2005-2007

3. GSIS has posted all premium and loan repayments of teachers based on remittances and documents made and submitted by DepEd.

GSIS has posted all premium and loan payments of DepEd based on actual remittances made and documents submitted in support of these payments. Again if there are discrepancies in the GSIS records and those of DepEd and/or the teachers, GSIS is ready to make the necessary updating as long as these are properly accompanied by acceptable proofs of payments and/or documents.

4. The Premium Based Policy and Claims and Loans Interdependency Policy (CLIP) are intended to restore the long-term financial solvency and viability of the GSIS pension fund

The Premium Based Policy and the CLIP are part and parcel of the reform agenda which was implemented to arrest the continuing deterioration in the financial health of the GSIS, as indicated by the increasing actuarial reserves deficiency and the declining life of the pension fund.

In 2001, the actuarial deficit hit record highs of P23 billion. The life of fund, on the other hand, was on a declining trend, with fund reserves estimated to be depleted by year 2028 in 2002 from 2065 in July 1997. Primarily accountable for this precarious financial condition of the pension fund were the huge premium arrearages, big portfolio of loans in default and unabated increases in claims and benefits averaging 19% per year.

The Premium Based Policy and CLIP are also intended to put equity in the administration of the pension system. To say that these policies are "unjust" is like saying "it is fair to get GSIS benefits without paying the premiums" or "it is alright to take out a GSIS loan and not pay for it."

Today, the reforms have successfully reversed the tide of financial decline, as GSIS now enjoys actuarial surpluses since 2004 and its life has gained 27 actuarial years in a period of only 5 years.

Fig. 3 GSIS Actuarial Deficit (PB) 1997-2006

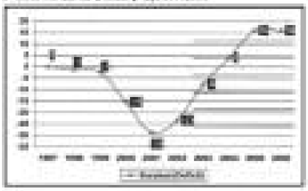

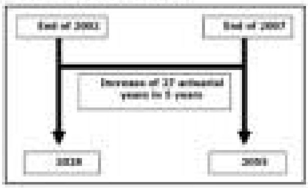

Fig. 4 Gain in the GSIS Actuarial Life

5. The GSIS has no control over the deduction and stoppage of loan repayments of teachers

It is unreasonable for MPSTA to blame GSIS for the sudden stoppage of deductions or non-deductions of loan amortizations of teachers because the responsibility for their payroll deduction rests with DepEd.

6. The problems of teachers on their cancelled housing loans emanate from their failure to pay the required monthly amortizations for at least five years

Most of the cancelled housing loan accounts of teachers have been in default for at least five years. GSIS, of late, is left with no other recourse but to cancel or foreclose these delinquent housing loan accounts because borrowers have persistently ignored the many notices of unpaid amortizations and restructuring options offered for accounts updating. As the trustee of the funds of its members, GSIS has to recover these investments to ensure the long-term growth and sustainability of the pension fund.

Resolving the concerns of teachers is a gargantuan task, but it is a task the GSIS, together with DepEd, is taking on with full resolve.

Towards this end, the GSIS has met and dialogued with MPSTA (and other teacher organizations, for that matter) many times before on these issues and concerns. GSIS is not blaming anybody. While it stands by the veracity of the records in its database, it remains willing to make the necessary corrections, as long as proper documents are submitted to effect these changes.

Likewise, GSIS has accordingly responded and clarified its position on issues and concerns raised by the MPSTA. Thus, for MPSTA to ventilate again in a public arena these allegations and unfair accusations of inefficiency against the GSIS at such high cost stirs our curiosity on the intent of the full page advertisement and the source of funding for the said publication.

It is our hope that MPSTA will seek for agreements rather than create confusions; that it will truly work for the best interest of its members and not for the furtherance of any other motive, political or otherwise.

Globe Bridging Communities wins the Grand Anvil

[illegible]

As we strengthen Globe's presence nationwide, we at Globe recognize the need to serve the communities by empowering not only their leaders but also the micro-entrepreneurs. We continue to expand our partnerships with cooperatives and various people organizations by supporting youth development and education, and by broadening the reach and impact of our employee volunteerism program.

The sweep and scale of these endeavors are reinforced by their individual components – each directed at a specific stakeholder and accomplished with flair and distinction.

Sound business sense and sustainability are the virtues of Globe Bridging Communities (BridgeCom). By focusing on providing livelihood skills and small business opportunities to the barangays, we have forged lasting relationships with the people who need them the most.

"This is social responsibility at its enlightened and farsighted best".

Citation from the Grand Anvil Award

Since July 2004, Globe Bridging Communities has implemented programs in some 1,500 barangays nationwide and 400 public schools benefiting 155,000 students and 1,200 teachers. It has connected 69 public high schools to the internet and has distributed 59 Personal Companions.

It has worked with 150 partners (NGOs, LGUs, People Organizations), has conducted 19 Medical Missions in 229 barangays, and has provided relief to 26 disaster-stricken barangays.

Since May 2005, Globe BridgeCom Sa Bayan – the leadership and entrepreneurship program of Globe BridgeCom – has conducted 150 leadership and livelihood training programs in 1,600 barangays, with 8,000 barangay leaders and micro-entrepreneurs.

In 2007, Globe BridgeCom Youth Leadership Development Program was launched and participated in by 1,400 youth leaders across the country. It included a Global Xchange program participated in by 100 British volunteers.

Globe BridgeCom's various employee volunteerism programs have involved 5,000 volunteers, generating 50,000 man-hours.

In its first four years, Globe BridgeCom has been presented in 35 local and international conferences and has won 31 awards including the Grand Anvil.

As we continue to be socially responsible in our business, our philosophy is to help improve the quality of life of the people in the barangays through various community and enterprise development projects. This is our commitment to society and the Filipino people.

Don't wait for another Cardinal Sin, bishop tells people

By Kristine L. Alave

DO THE RIGHT THING AND DON'T wait for another Cardinal Sin, a Catholic bishop urged the people yesterday.

Bishop Teodoro Bacani asked the people to denounce corruption in the Arroyo administration, pray for the truth and not wait for somebody like the influential former Cardinal Sin to lead them.

The late Manila archbishop's call for the public to converge on Edsa in February 1986 resulted in the downfall of a dictator.

In his homily at the Our Lady of Peace Shrine on Edsa in Mandaluyong City, Bacani compared the Arroyo administration to that of the late dictator Ferdinand Marcos, who was forced to flee the country on Feb. 25, 1986, after millions of Filipinos gathered at Edsa to denounce his oppressive regime and replace him with Corazon Aquino.

"Today, we are not faced with a conjugal dictatorship but with conjugal greed," Bacani said in the 2:30 p.m. Mass to celebrate the 22nd anniversary of the bloodless revolt, noting that this had led to corruption in the government.

He said Filipinos were outrageous had taken on "nicknames" like "Hello Garci," "Jocjoc," "ZTE" and "broadband."

Bacani was referring to the election scandal in which Ms Arroyo found herself accused of colluding with an election commissioner to ensure her million-vote margin over her nearest rival and the so-called fertilizer scam, allegedly engineered by Agriculture Undersecretary Jocelyn "Jocjoc" Bolante.

The last two "nicknames" referred to the latest controversy to hit the administration: The $329-million National Broadband Network deal with Chinese firm ZTE Corp.

Senate witnesses implicated the President's husband and ex-elections chief Benjamin Abalos Sr. in the allegedly graft-tainted and overpriced deal.

Like Marcos, Bacani said the Arroyo administration tried to hide the truth. He said the President and those in power should keep in mind that the truth would eventually come out. "There is nothing hidden that is not revealed," he said.

Bacani, however, stopped short of calling for Ms Arroyo's ouster. In his homily, the bishop recalled the Catholic Bishops' Conference of the Philippines' stand after the 1986 snap elections: "If a person stole public office, he was bound to give it up."

With the administration intent on holding the truth behind the controversies, Bacani, who celebrated the Mass with Bishop Deogracias Iñiguez, issued a challenge to the public to press for truth and "not let the fight die."

"Today, we have no such giant as Cardinal Sin. Today we are called to be giants. We should not be allowed to be cowed by anyone," he said.

"Cardinal Sin could lead because the people were afraid. I hope now that the people are not afraid. ... After 22 years of Edsa I, after Edsa II, we can now stand on our own and speak out," he added.

"This is another kind of people power. We are a mature people. We have found our voice. We will do our thing," he added.

Outside, close to a thousand militants breached the police cordon around the Shrine for the first time since 2001.

The Edsa Shrine, also the site of Edsa II which ousted President Joseph Estrada, was declared by the late Pope John Paul II to be a "Sacred Place" resulting in the banning of protests and rallies in the area.

Some 1,000 militants from groups like Bayan, Akbayan, Freedom from Debt Coalition and Kilusan ng Manggagawang Pilipino managed to outwit policemen at Edsa and step into the shrine area, with only a phalanx of policemen and the Metropolitan Manila Development Authority's pink fences between them and the church.

Argee Guevarra, an official of Sanlakas, said the groups split into three and took different routes to the shrine, which caught some 600 policemen on site by surprise.

Bearing streamers and banners, the protesters called for Ms Arroyo's ouster and the resignation of the officials involved in the NBN deal. The marchers, along with the Mass goers, lit candles on the street to show their unity.

The protesters, led by former Akbayan party-list Rep. Etta Rosales, asked the Eastern Police District to let them stay beyond the initially agreed-upon dispersal time of 4:30 p.m.
